

The Human Rights Research Center \(HRRC\) is pleased to announce a collaboration with Emerald Publishing relating to the International Journal of Human Rights in Healthcare (IJHRH).

Under this collaboration, the Human Rights Research Center supports the Journal by providing an international team of editors, bringing together diverse expertise and experience across human rights, healthcare, policy, and interdisciplinary research. The collaboration reflects a shared commitment to publishing high-quality and relevant research at the intersection of human rights and healthcare globally.

The editor team play a key role in supporting the journal's mission to publish impactful research that addresses pressing challenges in human rights in healthcare systems, policy, and practice. Drawing on HRRC's global research networks and experience, the partnership aims to enhance international representation and further the journal's role as a forum for key research in the field.

The editor team provided by the Human Rights Research Center (HRRC) are Natalie Bello (US), Nathalie Gullo (US), Charity Ndanu Mbalu (Kenya), and Simra Sohail (Pakistan). The editor team is chaired by Deanna Wilken (US), Founder and President of the Human Rights Research Center.

Through this collaboration, HRRC and IJHRH seek to foster an inclusive dialogue and to encourage submissions on research from a broad range of global contexts.

International Journal of Human Rights in Healthcare (IJHRH) is a peer reviewed journal with a unique practical approach to promoting equality, inclusion and human rights in health and social care.

Human Rights Research Center \(HRRC\) is an international, volunteer-led organization dedicated to making human rights research accessible.

